LONDO? GIVES BASEBALL THE GRAND RAZZING

American Games in British Capital Draw Weird Comment From Scribes.

By DAVID M. CHURCH. ONDON, Aug. 26.-"Well played, sir!"
"Jolly well bowled, sir!"

"Ripping, perfectly ripping!" These mild expressions, accompanied by a very dainty handclapping, are the only obstacles there are to a fine afternoon doze in the sun at Lord's.

Now Lord's is one of London's famous cricket grounds. Twenty thousand Londoners jam Lord's nearly every day to sleep, sip tea and incidentally watch the cricket

English sportsmen are entirely satisfied with the happenings of Lord's, but the restless Americans can't get much of a thrill out of this cricket game and so they have boldly and courageously made an attempt to introduce baseball into London. Americans Turn Out. First of all the American baseball players shocked London by staging their games on Sunday, and Sunday games are looked down upon in London. The Americans have persisted, however, and every Sunday afternoon finds a mob of Americans thrilling at their national game and a handful of Englishmen staring in with unseemly violence. More often amazement at the "absolutely absurd he lets the catcher absorb it. antics of these wild Americans."

At first the London press paid no attention to the American baseball games, because the sporting writers were always busy on Sunday afternoon figuring out the cricket scores of Saturday. Finally the baseball players at Stamford Bridge made so much noise that the editors just had to pay attention.
